Deepak had many chances to steal as he had the key to the room as well. But he was surprised with the amount of trust Arun had on him as he had never seen such a trusting person in his life. This trust thing was preventing him from robbing Arun as Deepak thought that robbing a careless person like Arun didn't make much difference, because he might not even notice that he had been robbed and that took out all the fun from the work. Then he thought of stealing Arun's money and justified himself that if he didn't steal money from Arun then also he would waste it on his friends and also Arun didn't pay him for the work that he did.

Deepak then woke up at night and quietly crawled to Arun's bed. He steals the money and decides to leave the city by Amritsar Express that departed at 10:30. When he reached the station, the train had slowly started moving from the platform. He could have easily caught the train, but he hesitated and he himself did not know the reason for it. Before he had reached the station he counted the money and it was 600 rupees in 50 rupee notes. He could live a lavish life for 2-3 weeks with so much money. After the train had left, Deepak was all alone at the train station. He was left with no place to sleep at night. The only person he knew was Arun and he had looked him as well. He sat on a bench in a park and as it started to ~~him~~ rain, he sat down under the clock tower. Then he realized that the notes had got wet. He realized that learn how to read and write would help him to get a much more respectable and honest job which would pay him much more than these few hundred rupees. Then he decided to go back to Arun's house.

He reached the room and placed the money back. Next morning, he woke up a bit late and Arun had already made his tea. Arun gave a five rupee note to Deepak as he had got paid for some work and he would be paid regularly. Deepak took the note in his hand and realized that the note was still wet from the rain last night. Deepak realized that Arun had come to know about his misdeed but there was no sadness, anger or guilt in his mind. The narrator smiled in a beautiful way and it was genuine happiness because he had saved himself from the wrong.

"The Doll's House" Short Story.

"The Doll's House" is a short story written by "Katherine Mansfield". The short story in the deep and describe of the house. In the three sister Bunnells family. Her name is Isabel, Kezia and Lottie. These is a rich and Kelveys sister her name is lil and else. These are a very poor.

Mrs Hay had come to stay as a guest with the Bunnell's family for some days. It was most beautiful house. After her return to the town, she sent a doll's house as a gift for the children, It was most beautiful house, a dark spinach green, picked out with bright yellow. It had two solid little chimneys in red and white colour, a yellow door, four little windows divided into panes by a broad streak of green. There was a tiny, yellow porch. It looked a perfect little house. The Bunnell children were greatly excited and hardly could suppress their joy and pride of being in possession of such a unique and lovely house which no other children in the village had. The house had all the rooms prepared with furniture, beautiful carpet, beds with real bedclothes, table, stove, kitchen utensils and an exquisite little lamp with a white globe. It contained father and mother dolls as well as two children dolls. The Bunnell children were too eager to tell the news about the house to their school mates and enjoy their jealous look. They also planned to bring one friend each daily and have a look at it. As they had planned, they took the first opportunity to tell about it to the girls. All the girls became impatient to see the house. The most favoured ones, of course, were given first preference as compared to the rest of the girls.

However, all these selected girls belonged to the rich strata of society. Among them, there were two girls who came from a low class. They were Kelsey sisters. They were daughters of a washerwoman. Their father always remained in jail. They were too poor and wore the clothes donated by the rich people. One of them was called 'Lil' and the other one was known as 'Else'. Lil was the elder sister who was stout and plump with big freckles. Else, the younger one was a tiny wishbone of a child with cropped hair and enormous, solemn eyes. She looked like a little white owl. She never smiled and hardly spoke. Always they were seen moving together. These two girls also listened intently when Isabel Bunnell described the doll's house to the other girls. These two girls also listened intently when Isabel Bunnell. Later on daily children came in pairs and saw the doll's house. except the kelvey sisters. The children tried to ask mother whether they could bring in kelveys but they were flatly refused the permission. At school, one day, children teased them saying that their father was a jail-bird and they were going to end up as a servant. After a few days the Bunnell children came home. They had some visitors and mother was busy with them.

The Bunnell sisters happened to see the kelvey sisters walking on the road. They thought since their mother was busy with the guest, this was a good opportunity to call them and show them the doll's house. The kelvey girls came in the yard with great hesitation and fear in mind. While they were busy appreciating the beauty of the doll's house, suddenly Aunt Beryl appeared. she scolded her nieces for having invited kelveys to the house and sent those girls away. They ran away with a great panic. when they reached a safe distance, they stopped. Else stopped and told her sister that she had seen the little lamp in the doll's house and gave one on her rare smiles.

Summarize the poem "up-Hill".

"up-Hill" is a poem written by a poet name is Christina Rossetti. This is a common style for poetry. It consists of four verses with four lines each. up-Hill is written from two persons, one who asks questions and one who provides answers of the questions.

Over the course of a journey, the narrator/poet asks her guide eight questions about the road ahead. Rossetti is able to create a poetic conversation between two people without complicating her work in any way, normally a fairly difficult thing to do. This is an easy poem to read and follow and flows nicely.

The first speaker asks about the road and weather or not uphill for its entire length as well as whether or not the time it will take to walk the road will mean the entire day. It is also possible that the long day in contrast to simply 'the day' refers to a twenty-four hour period. The only aspect of their character of particular note is that they refer to the other speaker as their friend.

The two characters portrayed here are clearly very different in their perspectives on the uphill journey. The first person is unsure and lacks confidence. here they ask if there is a place they can stay for the night, since their journey will take so long. The second person by contrast, is certain not only that there is an inn for shelter against the dark, but that they will undoubtedly find it before it is too dark to see.

The guide assures the narrator that there is inn and they will not be able to miss it. The narrator's fifth question is about which other travellers will be on the road at the inn. The guide tells the narrator that someone will open the door. lastly the narrator asks if there will be a bed for her. The guide tell her that there are beds for everyone.

Those are a god and speaker during the conversation of the difficult Journey and struggle of life.
